

COMMUNITY CONVERSATIONS ABOUT EDUCATION

FROM BIRTH THROUGH HIGH SCHOOL

Across America and here in Connecticut, citizens engage in lively discussions about education. There is common agreement that changes need to be made to prepare upcoming generations of citizens for the world around them. What these changes should be is the subject of spirited debate.

How can the quality of education debate be improved? How can these discussions be made more civil with a richer exchange of ideas among participants? How can the dialogue be more inclusive?

Community Conversations About Education offer an opportunity for communities to come together for dialogue and deliberation about significant educational issues. How can we make sure all children arrive at school ready to learn? How do we get more parents involved? What standards should our schools set? How do we deal with bullying? How can we best use limited funds to support our schools? Communities must consider such questions every day.

In over 92 Connecticut cities and towns, Conversations have helped citizens to engage in productive dialogue about local educational issues. According to David Nee, Executive Director of the William Caspar Graustein Memorial Fund, "Community Conversations have helped communities identify key issues and build local action plans."

GRANT OPPORTUNITIES

Initial grants of up to $2,500 for communities to host conversations on topics relevant to education. Alumni grants of up to $1,500 for a city or town that has previously held a Community Conversation.

Past Conversations have included topics such as:

Parental InvolvementEarly Learning and CareCreating a Formula for SuccessEarly LiteracyThe No Child Left Behind ActSchool/Family/Community PartnershipsSchool ReadinessBullyingEducation for Sustainable DevelopmentPurposes of EducationStudent Dress CodesGay/Lesbian/Bi/Transsexual Youth

Racial Rebalancing Making Standards Work School Safety

Helping All Students Succeed in a Diverse Society

Support materials are available to kick-off discussions about many of the above topics. Conversations staff are happy to help customize materials to support locally determined issues about education. Spanish language videos and guides are available for several topics.

THE GOALS

Community Conversations...

- Give participants an opportunity to speak openly about critical education issues.
- Bring together diverse groups of people to share thoughts and opinions.
- Help participants find common ground.
- Help to identify concerns and questions.
- Lead to shared perspectives and insights that generate new approaches to tough local issues.
- Develop options to move forward to action

THE PROCESS

- A local working group agrees to organize a planning team of 15-20 representatives.
- The planning team invites a diverse cross-section of 100+ local residents to attend.
- Conversation participants share a light meal and a general session before dividing into small groups.
- In small groups, all participants have an equal voice.
- Trained local moderators facilitate the small group discussion.
- Recorders take notes on flip charts to capture the essence of the dialogue. Notes are posted for comments and corrections.
- The notes serve as the basis for a report shared with participants, school boards and administrators, the media, and local government officials.
- Participants generate ideas for next steps and action plans.

HOW TO APPLY

The full application, guidelines, and deadline dates are available on our Web site:

www.ctconversations.org or at

Community Mediation 32 Elm Street, New Haven, CT 06510 phone: (203)782-3500 Fax: (203)782-3503

E-mail: mail@community-mediation.org
For more information, please contact:
Nancy Polk (203) 397-2799 or Mary Broderick (860) 739-7866

PARTNERS and ADVISORS

* Area Cooperative Educational Services (ACES)

*American Association of University Women (AAUW)

*ASPIRA of Connecticut

*Bridgeport Public Education Fund, Inc. *Connecticut Commission on Children *Connecticut Association of Boards of Education (CABE)

*Connecticut Association of Public School Superintendents (CAPSS)

*Connecticut Business and Industry Association (CBIA)

*Connecticut Center for School Change (CCSC) *Connecticut Education Association (CEA)

*Connecticut Conference of Municipalities (CCM)

*Connecticut Federation of Educational Professionals and Professional Employees (CFEPE)

*Connecticut Voices for Children

*Community Mediation *Connecticut Parent Teachers Association (CTPTA)

*National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) *School Readiness Council of New Haven *United Churches of Christ Public Education Advocacy Group *University of Connecticut NEAG School of Education *Urban League of Greater Hartford *William Caspar Graustein Memorial Fund

COMMUNITY CONVERSATIONS ABOUT EDUCATION are funded by:

William Caspar Graustein Memorial Fund 2319 Whitney Avenue, Suite 2B Hamden, CT 06518 http://www.wcgmf.org